Mana Common and the Latin Chamber of Commerce CAMACOL sign historic memorandum of understanding to work jointly to achieve their common goals in benefit of our community.

About Mana Common

Mana Common is a platform for neighborhood revitalization by pairing real estate with culture. CEO Moishe Mana is in the process of transforming Miami's Flagler Street corridor, establishing it as a global technology hub alongside commercial spaces for fashion, commerce and the arts. MANA led the artistic renaissance of Wynwood into a top tourist destination and is Miami's single largest landowner.

Mana Common believes that truly integrated neighborhoods, where residents can live, work, and play, are the wave of the future. As such, the divisions of Mana Common reflect the most basic elements upon which a community is built: Culture, Commerce, Technology, Property, Agriculture, and Social Impact.

The name, "Mana Common," originates from our belief that our world is becoming more and more connected. Rather than focusing on our differences, our shared humanity gives us common ground, common decency, and common knowledge upon which a truly thriving community ecosystem must be built.

Using the Mana Common process, we begin building community ecosystems long before any construction begins and continue to nurture them long afterwards. This allows for rapid, meaningful, permanent vitality for a neighborhood.

About the Latin Chamber of Commerce of the United States, CAMACOL

Founded in 1965, CAMACOL is the largest Hispanic business organization in the State of Florida and one of the largest and most influential minority business groups in the United States.

CAMACOL's mission has been to foster the entrepreneurial spirit of Hispanic and minority communities. To that end, the chamber conducts programs to strengthen local business activity, foster economic development, facilitate international trade, and serve the civic needs of our community.

CAMACOL has been committed to international business development in the Americas for over 45 years, with Miami as its hub. As such, CAMACOL established a unique international infrastructure comprised of the national chambers of commerce representing 26 countries. Today, these efforts have evolved to include representation from Europe and Asia as well, with a reach to over 300,000 businesses worldwide. Our are committed to promote initiatives and policies which foster free enterprise and trade, but through sustainable and socially responsible initiatives.

"We are honored to have signed this partnership which we are certain will accelerate the process of making our joint vision, a reality. We bring to the table over 45 years of experience in the region, and a commitment to not only better the quality of life for our citizens through economic development, but to do this through sustainable mechanisms. Miami. The hub of the Americas"

"Estamos honrados de haber firmado este acuerdo con el Sr. Mana y su compañía, pues compartimos la misma vision. La CAMACOL aporta mas de 45 años de experiencia en el ambito internacional. Tenemos como mandato no solamente mejorar la calidad de vida de nuestros ciudadanos a traves de iniciativas de desarrollo economico, pero lograr esto a traves de esfuerzos que promueven la sostenibilidad y responsabilidad social en nuestras comunidades"

Joe Chi, President, CAMACOL

"For over a decade, we have worked towards making Miami a leading global city for technology, innovation, and commerce. We believe in a unified Western Hemisphere as a powerful economic engine connecting more than a billion people. Miami will play a key role as the gateway between the US and Latin America. Through this partnership, we will work together to make that vision a reality."

"Por más de una década, hemos trabajado para transformar Miami en un centro global de economía, innovación y comercio. Creemos en un hemisferio occidental unificado que actúa como un poder económico potente y conecta más de 1 billón de personas. Miami tendrá el papel clave de ser el punto de conexión entre los Estados Unidos y América Latina. A través de esta sociedad, nosotros trabajaremos juntos para asegurar que esta visión se haga realidad."
